

Water repellence

Water repellence occurs when waxes form from decayed organic material, impeding water infiltration and affecting seedling germination early in the season. The presence and severity of water repellence can be determined annually by conducting a water droplet penetration test. Add links here These are words from Mel's document

